

Ralph Balancio

I was born and raised in the Bronx, with roots in Woodlawn, and have been a lifelong passionate supporter of the borough, and Belmont which I now call home. A proud graduate of St. Barnabas Grammar School and Mt. St. Michael Academy, I later earned a BS in Business Management from the University of Phoenix in San Diego. My career has spanned various roles, including work at NY Telephone, driving commuter buses for Liberty Lines, and spending years as a propane tanker driver across the U.S. After living in San Diego, Rapid City, and Tucson, and retiring in 2013, I returned to the Bronx in 2017.

I believe a strong focus should be placed on improving quality of life in Belmont, and I am committed to raising and addressing the key issues that impact the community, such as EDP, illegal use of scooters and mopeds, and homelessness.

I am a proud father of a University of Arizona graduate and enjoy spending time with my family and friends and watching football. I continue to support the borough in every way I can, and love to patronize the family owned and operated small businesses of Belmont.
